Graduate Certificate in Mediation and Conflict Resolution

University of San Diego

The Kroc School of Peace Studies at the University of San Diego, in collaboration with the Imagine Center for Conflict Transformation, invites you to apply to the Graduate Certificate in Mediation & Conflict Resolution. This program provides an opportunity for students to participate in a semester-long full-time program that takes place part-online and part in-person.

The program consists of three courses: (1) Mediation, (2) Conflict Analysis & Resolution, and (3) Intervention Design. The online part spread out over a remote Fall 2024 semester, followed by a residency on October 18- November 3, 2024 at the University of San Diego.

The program is open to citizens of any country, with full and partial scholarships currently available for applicants from the South Caucasus and Ukraine.

If you are interested in applying, please send a CV and a short letter explaining how you intend to use the learning from the certificate program upon return at info@imaginedialogue.com, by March 15, 2024 or earlier. Should your credentials match the entry requirements, we will follow up with an application package.

Who is the program for?

The program is designed for civil society leaders, social scientists, peace and conflict practitioners and activists, and others committed to working towards conflict resolution. Bachelor's degree is required.

Curriculum

The Graduate Certificate in Mediation & Conflict Resolution (CERT-MCR) is a 9-unit, professional certificate that is structured with mid-career professionals in mind and offers them access to some of the most sought-after courses taught at the Kroc School of Peace Studies of University of San Diego. The three courses that make up the certification are designed to build upon one another, with content and expectations compounding, such that recipients could continue to obtain a full graduate degree from any of the programs offered at the Kroc School, should they wish to continue.

The courses will cover three core areas: Theory & Analysis (1 course), Mediation (1 courses); Intervention Design (1 course). The certificate program includes an online semester that starts in late September and ends in December 2024. And a residency at the University of San Diego in October-November 2024.

Learning Environment

Conflict Analysis and Resolution and Mediation will feature 6 online sessions each and a two-week residency at the USD San Diego campus in October-November, 2024. The participation in the residency is contingent upon the participation in all the preceding Zoom sessions, and the successful completion of the reading and writing assignments of all the courses, with the grades averaging B or above. After completing the residency, the students will submit their final assignments, one for Conflict Analysis and another for Mediation Design. The Intervention Design will feature 12 online sessions lasting from September until December and two in-person sessions in San Diego. The Graduate Certificate program is designed as a full-time study. The students will be expected to devote a minimum of 21 hours per week (or more) for the entire duration of the program from September 1 to December 15.

Learning Outcomes and Follow Up Expectations

Upon completion of the program, graduates will be able to work in complex and diverse conflict environments ranging from inter-personal to organizational, community, and international to anticipate and prevent, de-escalate, manage, resolve, or positively transform conflict situations. They will emerge with the knowledge, skills, and emotional and situational intelligence to determine the appropriate style of intervention for various conflict situations while operating from the relationship-building, sustainable, and ethical solution lens.

Following the program, the interested graduates will be offered various collaboration opportunities, including writing a series of op-eds, conducting field research focused on building an infrastructure for bringing into the peace process voices of conflict affected populations and more. Students interested in developing their own follow up projects, will receive support from the Imagine Center and the Kroc School towards fundraising and implementation of their intervention.
